

Geriaction National Conference 2007

11 & 12 October 2007
Royal on the Park Hotel
Brisbane

Caring for the Aged
in all Contexts:
models, myths and magic

Call for Abstracts Deadline extended to 30 June

As the Australian population ages, the older person is becoming the largest consumer of health and care services regardless of where the service is provided. Traditionally aged care has been synonymous for residential care even though the majority of older adults have lived in their own home.

Health care provided to the older person has rapidly become core business for community, subacute services and acute hospitals. Numerous programs have been developed across the country to provide care to the older person in a diverse range of settings. Federal and state governments, community service providers and acute care services are constantly challenged to meet increasing demands.

Geriaction's National Conference 2007 will provide an excellent opportunity for clinicians, researchers, academics and service providers to present and showcase initiatives and models that enhance the care of the older person across the continuum.

Themes:

- Contemporary care of acute illness in the elderly
- From trivia to trauma – emergency care of the elderly
- Acute hospital care
- Safety and quality in care of the elderly
- Developing a workforce skilled for aged care consumers
- Connecting the dots across the continuum
- Intergenerational issues in health services for the aged
- Aged friendly environments

Generation Inc. invites abstracts for inclusion in the conference program, which will include plenary and concurrent sessions and poster displays.

The conference will provide an excellent opportunity for participation and networking with colleagues, with a trade display and a fun program planned for the conference dinner.

Criteria for submission of abstracts can be obtained from the conference organiser, Sally Brown, Conference Connections sally.brown@uq.net.au or on the Geriaction website at www.geriaction.com.au/conference
